BREAST CENTER IN DALLAS UNVEILS $3 MILLION TRANSFORMATION

The Linda and Mitch Hart Breast Center at Methodist Dallas Medical Center unveiled its brand new space with an October 19 ribbon-cutting event.

After a $3 million overhaul, members of the Breast Center staff joined donor Linda Hart, supporters, and health system executives to tour the updated women’s imaging area, which is part of Pavilion II.

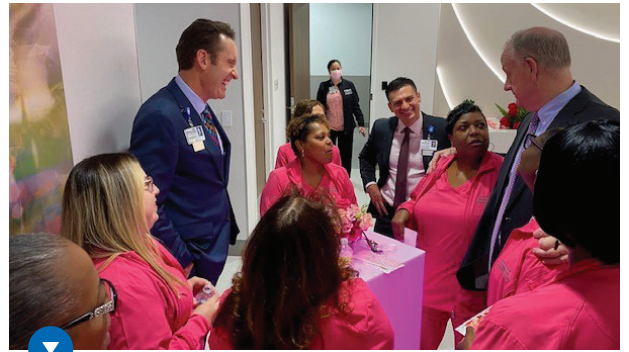

“This was not a quick coat of paint and new furniture,” says James C. Scoggin, Jr., Chief Executive Officer, Methodist Health System. “This was literally a transformation which will, in turn, transform many lives.”

The physical improvements have not only enhanced the care setting, but they’ve also helped increase capacity and ensure access to advanced screening, diagnostic, and treatment services, benefiting patients and community members.

The proceeds derived from the 2021 Robert S. Folsom Leadership Award were designated for this capital project.

ECMO IS READY TO HELP OUR MOST CRITICAL PATIENTS

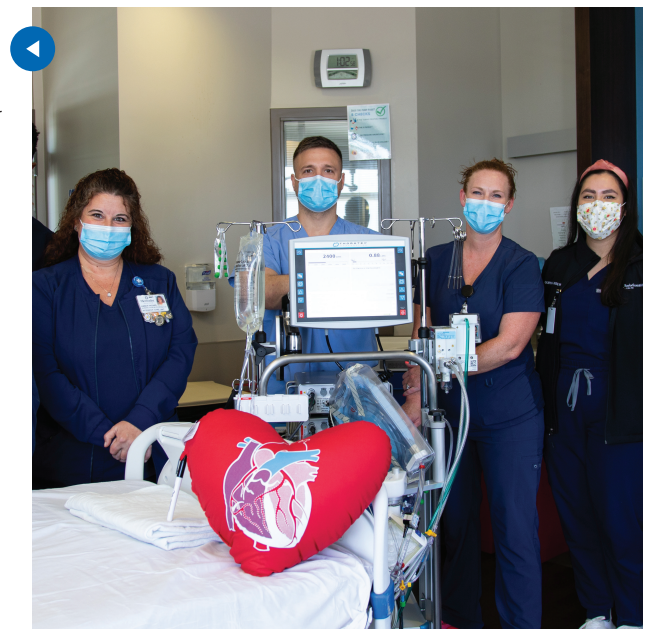

Methodist Dallas Medical Center’s new extracorporeal membrane oxygenation (ECMO) machine is being credited for saving numerous lives, marking the start of a new chapter for Methodist Health System.

Methodist Dallas began offering this treatment in 2022 to provide life support to the hospital’s sickest heart and lung patients.

“It helps us support critically ill patients, who would not otherwise survive,” says David Mason, MD, thoracic surgeon on the medical staff at Methodist Dallas. “It allows us to treat the sickest patients at Methodist and provide them the highest level of care. We have built an outstanding team and are excited about the future.”

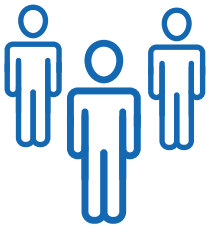

Reserved for the most severe conditions, the ECMO machine pumps blood from a patient’s body, oxygenates it and removes carbon dioxide from circulation, then returns the blood to the body. By temporarily supporting the functions of the heart and lungs, this new equipment primarily helps patients who are in profound respiratory and cardiac failure and do not respond to traditional therapies, such as ventilators or medical support.

“The significance of ECMO is that it will allow us to provide a higher level of cardiopulmonary care,” says Mini Sivadasan, MD, cardiothoracic surgeon on the medical staff at Methodist Dallas.

METHODIST STAFF RALLIES TO SUPPORT UKRAINIAN WAR REFUGEES

The laboratory services team at Methodist Dallas generously donated over $500 to support a group of New York City doctors and volunteers who provided medical aid to Ukrainian refugees.

“We are proud of our team for its compassion and drive,” says John Strathearn, director of laboratory services at Methodist Health System. “Every little donation counts, and we are committed to helping those in need, no matter who they are and where they come from.”

Laboratory staff also sent two full boxes of donated medical supplies, including bandages, gauze, antibiotic ointments, diapers, and other essential items. The medical camp was set up on the Ukrainian border in Przemyśl, Poland. Once the volunteer group landed in Poland, they joined others from Samaritan’s Purse, an international relief organization.

BRINGING HEALTH CARE TO UKRAINE

The war in Ukraine has devastated the country’s healthcare system, and access to medical care remains a big challenge a year after the conflict began. It’s this need that galvanized Danny Holland, DO, orthopedic surgeon on the medical staff at Methodist Dallas Medical Center, to volunteer in a war zone.

In October 2022, Dr. Holland joined a medical team that traveled to eastern Ukraine, about 30 miles from the front lines, to staff an emergency field hospital run by international relief organization Samaritan’s Purse. He’s been home for months but was only recently cleared to discuss the trip, for security reasons.

The decision to go was a “no-brainer,” Dr. Holland says, even though it meant spending a month away from his wife and five daughters.

“For me, it really is a calling,” he adds. “I would definitely go back if given the chance.”
